RANDOM RESEARCH NOTES

The original nine realms of the Norse universe were probably:

Asgard – Realm of the Aesir

Alfheim – Realm of the Bright Elves

Jotunheim – Realm of the Giants

Midgard – Realm of the Humans

Muspelheim/Muspell – A fire-giant or the forces of chaos or their realm

Nidavellir – Realm of the Dwarves

Niflheim – Realm of Ice and Mist possibly with lower realm of Niflhel

Svartalfheim – Realm of the Black Elves

Vanaheim – Realm of the Vanir

After Snorri's work, the nine realms changed as he seems to have confused the black elves with the dwarves and merged Nidavellir with Svartalfheim as a single realm while adding the concept of Hel as the most populous realm of the afterlife and making other changes. The nine realms according to Snorri Sturluson and those who wrote after him are:

Asgard – Realm of the Aesir, joined to Midgard by the rainbow bridge Bifrost

Alfheim – Realm of the Elves

Hel – Realm of those who died of illness or old age and then of most people

Jotunheim – Realm of the Giants and Frost Giants

Midgard – Realm of the Humans between Asgard and Jotunheim

Muspelheim – Realm of Fire, the fire-giant Surtr, and Surtr’s forces of chaos
 Nidavellir/Svartalfheim – Realm of the Dwarves beneath the earth
 Niflheim – Realm of Ice, Snow, and Mist near Muspelheim
 Vanaheim – Realm of the Vanir

These nine most likely would not all be recognized by a pre-Christian Scandinavian but they are the clearest depiction of the Nine Realms available in the present day. The same is true of the story of the creation of the world and human beings which may have been quite different when the Norse religion was a living, dynamic faith.

In marvel universe, there are 10 realms. The 10th being Heven, home of the Angels. A paradisal realm. Heven was cut off from the other 9 by Odin during a war against Asgard, it is reopened by Thor and Loki.
